In San Clemente, Calif., President Nizon, through a spokesman at the Western White House, expressed a "sense of deep outrage" about the killings.

UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, who called the act "dastardly," appealed to the Arabs to release the hostages. In a statement sent to the 132 UN member states, he called the incident "the more shocking for having taken place at the Olympic Games which represent one of man's oldest and noblest efforts to foster friendship, understand-ing and reconciliation among the peoples of all the world."

White House spokesman Ron Ziegler said the President was following the developments closely and conferred with his chief foreign affairs aide, Henry A. Kissinger, on the incident.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers asked Israel's ambassador to convey to the Israeli government and people our profond sorrow and sense of horror at the morning ... "With all nations and peoples around the world, we fervently hope that no further innocent lives will be st. ifficed. This assault on the Israeli Olympic team is offensive to men and women of goodwill everywhere for whom the Olympic Games are a symbol of man's striving for reconciliation and peace."

Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern said he was "sickened by the outrage" and extended "deepest sympathy to the families of the victims of this shocking event. That a small hand of terrorists could disrupt a pageant that had brought the entire world trgether in friendship is something that symbolizes the dangerous currents of violence loose in the world today ...

"Until the leaders of the Mideast meet and directly negotiate an end to their war, there is the ever-present danger of more raids, more assessinations, more terrorism and more hijackings in this country and elsewhere." Sen. McGovern said in a statement. His running mate, Sargent Shri-

There were also contradictory reports on how many guerrillas had been killed and-whether any had escaped. Some reports said a West German policeman had been killed at the airport.

A Boeing-727 airliner had been waiting at the air base to fly the guerrillas—and possibly the hostages out of the country.

Before the shooting broke out at the airfield, two of the guerrillas had left the helicopters and inspected the airliner.

They returned to the helicopters, brought out the hostages and began marching them toward the airliner, according to witnesses.

A government spokesman said the two British trawlers involved in today's incidents were unmarked and were fishing east of Iceland's North Cape. The gunboat Aegir, 930-ton

One of the dead Israelis, left outside the apartment building with two shots in the head and one in the stomach from a submachine gun, was identified by the victim's mother, who lives in Munich, as Moshe Weinberg, a 33-year-old wrestling coach of the Israeli team. He had become a father one month ago, it was disclosed by an Israeli who said he was the victim's best friend.

Mr. Daume said Yosef Romano. 32-year-old Israeli weightlifter, had died. He gave no details. Mrs. Meir named the hostages

When the Joy Ended at Munich

By Bernard Karsen MUNICH, Sept. 5 (IHT) - The schedule today called for sightseeing and rest. Watch: the Jesus Freaks perform. See the actors at Spielstrasse. Listen to the flutes.

When Munich awoke this morning from its beer drinking and night of Gemuetlichkeit, an army of uniformed men had surrounded the eight-foot-high fence. which is supposed to separate the rest of the world from the Olympic Village. That was what it was supposed to do, and except for men with pistols and submachine guns, that's what it did. Izraeli weightlifting coach Tu-via Sokolovsky recalled how he was awakened at 4:30 this morn-

Mr. Sokolovsky said that as he was running, he heard shots and he said he thought that the man holding the door was shot. All but 11 of the 42-member Israeli had said that the door was held by Yosef Gottfreund.

Mr. Romano, 28, was later identifled as the second Israeli slain in the attack. The weightlifter was supposed to go home tomorrow for an operation on torn cartilages in his leg.

By afternoon, as the situation remained static, with the terrorists again and again pushing back the time limit for their ultimatum-they wanted the release of 200 Palestinian prisoners in Israel in exchange for the hostages -crowds began milling around the fences. They would easily have filled the 80,000-seat Olympic Stadium and, after all, what else was there to do?. Only a little weightlifting, some boxing and other minor events were un tap for today's Games.

A small group of Israelis sat outside on the grass, as close to the Israeli compound as the fences would allow. Israel has never won an Olympic medal and no one expected this year to be any different. But there had been a joy in being in Munich. The Israelis sang today "Sholom Aleichem," while young girls raised signs; "Sports Not War" and "Stop the Games," and if one had not known of the drama inside the village, it might have

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (NYT).-The White House and the Labor Department denied yesterday that the Nixon acministration was planning to scrap the controversial Philadelphia plan, under which federal construction contractors in Philadelphia have been required to hire certain percentages of workers from minority races.

The New York Times reported yesterday, in a story also carried by the International Herald Tribune, that according to sources in the department and the White House the administration had decided to do away with the plan. The plan was put into effect in 1989 and was publicized by the administration as one of the keystones of its civil rights program. President Nixon declared in a

HOUSTON - 'For God's sake, don't sell those things."

The frantic transatlantic call was from Col. David R. Scott in Houston, said Horst Walter Eiermann, an old friend in Stuttgart, West Germany, to whom the astronaut had mailed 100 postal covers taken to the moon on last year's Apollo-15 mission.

Mr. Elermann said he hurriedly contacted Hermann II. Sieger, the West German stamp dealer to whom he had given the Apollo-15 envelopes. He passed on the

The boys don't want you to sell those things!"

Mr. Elermann, recalling the conversation of last September, remembers Mr. Sleger's curt reply: "Too late. They've already een offered on the market." The postal covers bearing the Apollo-15 emblem were a philatelic dream. Each bore the astronauts autographs, each was canceled twice—at Cape Kennedy upon launch and on the recovery ship USS Orinawa on splashdown. Col. Scott and fallow astronant Lt. Col. James B. Irwin also had autographed them on the moon. Mr. Sieger kept one of the 100 covers he received from Mr. Elermann and sold the 99 others for a total of $150,000. Mr. Sieger, according to Mr. Elermann, said it was his idea for the astronauts to take the canceled envelopes to the moon and to set up trust funds for the astronauts' children with $21,000 from sale of the

Mr. Elermann became acquainted with the astronauts during the 10 years he lived at Cape Kennedy when he was a salesman for a supplier to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He said he received a $15,000 commission on the sale of the postal covers in West Ger-

He also got a guilty conscience. As a friend of the astronauts, he had conveyed Mr. Sieger's idea to them. "I feel crummy as hell about the whole thing," he said. "All the guys [the astronauts] are friends of mine. I feel lousy. But that's not going to help them."

Col. Scott, Lt. Irwin and the third Apollo-15 crew member, Maj. Alfred M. Worden, were reprimanded by NASA. Mr. Sieger feels fine, but sorry the incident ended the way it did. However, he added, "it's good business."

He said he was trying to repurchase the 99 covers he sold because he now had customers price. Mr. Elermann and Mr. Sieger revealed their roles in the episode in telephone interviews from their homes in Stuttgart and Lorch, West Germany, last

It was after publicity about the sale of the postal covers began to leak out that the astroneuts decided they wanted no part of the funds from the sales, Mr. Eiermann said.

Mr. Elermann said Mr. Sleger was supposed to be "very discreet" in selling the 99 covers. Instead he went on, Mr. Sieger sent out 1,000 circulars ballyhooing the envelopes, complete with photo-graphs of them and detailed de-

"It was Col. Scott's understanding the covers would not be sold until the Apollo program ended [with Apollo-17 in December, 1972]," he said.

Justice Douglas agreed, to a query by Mr. Sevareid, that President Roosevelt in a letter to party chairman Bob Hannegan in 1944, listed Justice Douglas and Harry Truman, in that order, as the two men acceptable to him for vice-president, but that Mr. Hannegan had the names turned around when he sent the letter-out to party leaders. International Terror

With grim appropriateness, the sudden in- that a poor man who shoots up a pienic Munich coincided with a meeting in Washington to discuss methods of curbing plane hijackings. To be sure, this specific problem was only incidentally involved in the Munich outrage, but the actions of the Arab terrorlsts provided a striking illustration of the fact that the 'fragility' which Mr. Charles H. Brower ascribed to the "civil aviation network" during the Washington talks is ov no means confined to air travel. In today's close-knit world, international terror can be a disruptive influence over a far wider area than civil aviation.

To be sure, the Palestinian Arabs have a case, and the Munich terrorists, bowever much they have damaged that case in the eyes of the world, will have sympathy in some quarters. But it is not necessary to pass moral judgments upon a criminal in order to try to stop crime. Poverty admittedly is a source of crime, but that does not mean

But nothing that has happened in Munich so far this summer can compare with the awesome feats of Mark Spitz. swimmer extraordinary. It seemed ridiculous a few weeks ago when some observers suggested that Spitz would win seven gold medals and thereby set an Olympic mark in this respect. But that is exactly what the dentist-to-be from Carmichael, Calif., has done. His is clearly the outstanding individual performance of the 1972 Olympics. and his record bag of gold medals will not soon or easily be surpassed. jection of terror into the Olympic Games at should not be arrested and, after due trial

The Washington conference is wranging over just how to cope with bliackings. The United States and Canada want a summary process of sanctions against nations harboring hijackers; the Soviet Union, with the rather muted support of Britain and France, is afraid that this will by-pass the United Nations Security Council and Alli not attract enough support. The objectors may be right, but it is up to them to provide some better plan-not only for giving international law the power to deal with hijackers, but to prevent terrorists from receiving asylum anywhere.

The ideological complexities of such an approach are admittedly very great. What is a crime in one country is an act of patriotlsm. or revolutionary fervor. in another. To bring terror under an international ban would undoubtedly support the status quo, however unjust that might be.

But the alternative is to place the international community at the mercy of fanatics as well as of the dedicated; of the weak in mind as well as the strong in will. And for a world that is just emerging, after decades of war and revolution, into some semblance of reasonable order and security, that is into:erable-aud impracticable.

Surely it is not beyond the bounds of legal statesmanship to contrive a system which will recognize that some forms of revolutionary or nationalistic activity are beyond the pale, and that harboring those who commit such actions is an offense against the world community. The Olympic Games, for all their faults (and they have many), are still the most spectacular example of innocent global association. That murder and violence should intrude there, whatever the motive, is bad; that it should come as an offshoot of political violence elsewhere. sbeds a lurid light on the threats which international terror and private war pose for every nation and every people.

Another kind of elitism, however seems to us to require at least as much attention, being both more pernicious and more easily disguised than the obvious kind that goes with being a "limousine liberal" It is the elitlsm of men in government who hold that you can do one thing and say another and that the people (ever manipulatable) will never be the wiser, that what you confide to the Washington press and governmental elite is quite another matter from what you pitch to the public at large. It holds, in other words, that the people arc in fact too dumb to recognize distortions of the truth and too mean-minded in any event to respond to anything but an appeal to prejudice.

Cypicism would be another name for this form of elitist thinking. For almost four years now it has run through Nixon administration attempts to explain to the Washington press corps (and to each other) how it is that you can only "sell" a worthwhile program by pretending that it is something quite different from what it is. We bring it up because it reached new heights in the President's address to the people on Sunday.

Thus Mr. Nixoo, who lists as his top legislative priority passage of a welfare relorm hill that would at least double the number of persons receiving welfare benefits, inveighs against the "welfare ethle" and those who favor a policy of "Income redistrioution, which is exactly what his welfare program is. NEW YORK-It is reported on good authority that a secret pou is being taken by leaders of organized labor throughout the country on the advisability of a general strike against the Chicago injunction secured by the government aod in aid of the striking railway sbopmen. Labor leaders appear confident that the unions will decide to ignore the injunction as a test of their Constitutional rights, and already they are raising funds to take the case to the Su-state New York, concerned about American planes bombing the dikes in North Vietnam, wrote 2 letter receotly to President Nixon. He got an answer from the acting assistant secretary of state for public affairs, John Richardson jr. As an example of cootemporary official logic it deserves a wider audience.

"The United States has used great restraint in its bombing policy," Richardson said. "The conservancy system of North Vietnam is not a target In our air efforts supporting South Vietnam's defense against North Vietnam's invasion.

"We are, however, hittling military and military-related targets as North Vietnam's communications and supply systems. In some parts of North Vietnam the only dry ground is on the tops of dikes. Roads used for supply convoys often run along the tops of the dikes. Similarly antiaircraft weapons are placed on or adjacent to dises. In some Instances, therefore, in carrying out attacks on military and military-related targets, dikes have been hit. The dikes themselves. however, have not been the tar-

"We have no desire to weaken the water conservancy system of. or add to the suffering of the North Vletnamese people."

On Receiving End

How would Americans feel if, somehow, they were on the receiring end of such logic, such sympathy? If an enormously greater power that bad been bombing them for seven years said it bad no desire to add to their suffering? If the water mains in Chicago and Philadelphia bad been damaged and a spokesman for the bombers sald solemnly that the Americans had unfortunately put the mains under roads used for Supply convoys . . .?

For most of us such a reversal of fortunes is beyond the imagination. We cannot put ourselves in the position of people whose survival depends on mud dikes, who have no place to put a road except on top of them, who build plete papers in the public record even a wheelbarrow. But is it conceivable that those whose duty it is to explain American policy in Vietnam do not understand the consequences of that policy? When John Richardson ir, writes about the "great restraint" of American bombing policy, is he aware that the U.S. has dropped on Indochina more than three times the tonnage of bombs used against Germany and Japan in World War II? Or does he drive such facts from his

Does Richardson ever feel nauseous when dictating sen-tences such as, "We have no desire to . . . add to the suffering . . .?" Is he consciously cynical when he says that we are not bombing dikes, only the roads on top of them? What about the Pentagon spokesman, Jerry W. All that is true enough. The question is why so many men have followed such orders for so long. Irving Marder (like me) knows Mary McCarthy only through ber writings (IHT, Aug. 30). Has he understood them? Consider those "malicious detalls" about contraception. What Mary McCarthy was being maliclous about ("The Group"; was precisely the dehumanizing effect of technology: technology is made up of techniques, which the convention of her novel requires her to describe in detail. Thus, in the interview on French TV. Miss McCarthy cave the only reasonable answer to a not very reasonable question. She might well bave regarded as dehumanizing any toleration of "a little probing" into the breakup of her marriage to the late Edmund Wilson, French TV is not free to interview members of the government in an adversary style. A pity-out on the other hand there is no David Frost, eitner.

The contemporary statesman Miss McCarthy most admires is Pham Van Dong-a telling point that she succeeded in making during the very few minutes that were devoted to Vietnam. That admiration (discussed in the last chapter of "Hanoi") is important. It is a powerful answer to such unreal but common arguments as Kenneth Crawford's But for war... Saigon would oe Ho Cbi Minb City and all of Indochina would be as strictly regimented as North Vietnam is" (IHT, Aug. 30).

Marder and Crawford ofike assume, in our disastrous American way, that ideas are nothing more than career-building blocks. Kenneth Crawford, in "Thoughts on Outery Over Bombing" (IHT, Aug. 30) should substantiate his equation of a Hitlerruled Europe with Saigon as "Ho Chi Minh Clty." I would suggest that a better equation would result by replacing the latter with "Thieu City." Did people in Europe weep at the news of Hitler's death? Would they weep in South Vietnam at the passing of Thieu? There was reportedly widespread corrow in South Vietnam at the passing

A committee from seven nations yesterday released a report it spent two years gathering in 24 countries on what schools will and should be in the future. The report was made for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization;

If trends in education continue and the recommendations of the committee are followed, a revolution could sweep away within two decades education as it is known

In the committee's report in book form, "Learning to Be," the main guidelines are "democracy, flexibility and continuity."

A frend already is aloot to fling open the "gates of educational opportunity to all instead of working for a self-perpetuating elite," said the report. But still there is a gap in democratizing educational systems, including those in socialist countries, and "the universal right to education is often refused to the centers. removed from rural populations or poor suburbs. Nutrition, family background and factors like housing play a role fir school success and even in some socialist countries children of executives tend to get higher -school ratings than children of workers," the report said.

"What is needed is not equal treatment for all pupils but provision for each individual of a suitable education at a suitable pace for his perticular needs."

Thus, said the report, out should go grades, examinations and entrance requirements (already abolished in Sweden) or even rules that a student has to finish a certain number of semesters or years to complete a course or get a degree. There would be no degrees or "completed" courses.

"There is little evidence that selection procedures are capabla of predicting adequately whether an individual has the antitudes required for a particular career." marking system enables an individual's achievements to be compared with that of his peers. it rarely considers his progress in relation to his own starting level."

The Unesco committee concluded that the education revolution should overthrow the tradition that a student finishes higher education at the age of 21 or 50. Instead, a person could leave a university or secondary school in midstream and re-enter 20 years later, or work at the same time he attends classes. "Confinual Education"

"Once education becomes continnal, ideas as to what constichange. An individual who fails at a given age and level in education will have other opportuni-ties." the report said.

The committee emphasized that it did not mean sdults should he confined to evening classes. Child and adult education should be integrated so that schools would not be reserved for children but "would hecoma places of learning for children and adults."

"Pupils would cease to regard learning as the acquisition of a

Change Small at Amchitka

A-Blast in Aleutians Altered Is Kidnapped Magnetic Field of the Island In Argentina

By Thomas O'Toole

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (WP) .--The Cannikin nuclear explosion that rocked the Aleutian Island of Amchika with a force of five megatons last November caused a change in the earth's magnetic

The change was small and apparently confined to the earth around Amchitka, but the American test, opposed by environ-mentalists, so squeezed the is-land's volcanic rock or produced so much stress in the rock that it permanently altered the island's magnetism.

"It's not enough to change fish or hird migrations, not even enough to see on a compass." said William P. Hasbrouck of the National Oceanic and Atmospher-ic Administration, "but we have witnessed for the first time a seismic event large enough to have triggered change in the earth's magnetic field."

He said that large earthquakes may have also changed the earth's magnetism but have never been measured because earthquakes come so unexpectedly. The Cannikin test was a predictable event, he explained, so acientists were able to prepare their in-

4 Sites Checked

Setting up magnetometers at four locations on Amehitka, Mr. Hasbrouck found changes in the magnetic field at all four places immediately after the Cannikin explosion, which he said put a as much as 13 gammas on one side of a geological fault less than two miles from the site of the explosion. The field de-creased 11 gammas on the other side of the fault and went up nina gammas at the northwest edge of the island, 20 miles from

None of these changes was sizable, since the total magnetic field of the earth is 30,000 gammas. One gamma is a unit of force expressing magnetic field intensity.

Just how the nuclear explosion forced even tiny changes on the earth's magnetic field is unclear, though Mr. Hashrouck helieves in twn probable causes.

Stress Patterns

"Either the stress produced an irreversible change in the remnant of magnetism hy squeezing the magnetic rocks on the island," he said, "or the subterranean stresses produced by the test were not relieved, producing permanent alterations stress patterns on Amchitka."

Whatever the reason, Mr. Hasbrounk hopes the change in the magnetic field on Amchitka might lead scientists to a new understanding of how earthquakes alter the earth. He even thinks it might some day provide a tool for forecasting when earthquakes might happen.

"Earthquakes occur after changes take place in the stresses holding the earth's crust together," he said. "It's just pos-sible that as these stresses change stress on the island that was sible that as these stresses change equal to 30 times that of gravity. We can see it magnetically. It's The magnetic field increased certainly worth exploring."

Genêt: French Rigor And American Gusto

PARIS (IHT) -In 1922 "Ulysses" was published. So were "The Waste Land," "The Forsyte Saga," "The Beautiful and Damned" and "The Enormous Room," to say nothing of "The Garden Party" and "Peter Whiffle." It was a year when apparently everyone was young in Paris, and Janet Flanner, mad on dancing and filled with literary ambition, arrived in a hotel on the Rue Bonaparte.

Before Paris, she had written a New York-based novel called "The Cubical City," which was, she says, not as good as its title, and hefore that she had been a film critic in her native Indianapells, which had the first movie palace with an orchestra that

The crucial moment in Miss Flanner's career occurred three years after she arrived in Paris when Harold Ross, whom she had met in New York, invited her to write a Paris letter for his new magazine. The New Yorker. Ross instructed her to write about what the French thought was going on, not what she thought was going on, and gave her an inexplicable pen name: Genet.

Spacious Range

From the start the Letter From Paris ranged spaciously and stylishly over politics, the arts, personalities and gossip with a scope no other journalist can touch. Cabled fortnightly to New York it was topical in intent ("I used to beat Time magazine. That mad' me laugh") but has proved to be enduring literature, as enlightening to the Paris-based reader as to the little old lady

"I like the Paris Letter, I think in The New Yorker It is a useful vehicle," Miss Flanner says, "It's quite bearded now, and antique," she adds. When she began the Letter she knew she wanted it to be

"precisely accurate, highly personal, colorful and ocularly descriptive." The speed can be lifted to such a high tension in it," she "It's an animated picture frame, it's very animated. I don't have to try to animate it." Miss Flanner is small, striking and doughty, a constant smoker and an elegant and salty talker. She wishes her skull were shaped like her friend Mary McCarthy's and she used her nose as a pretext to avoid the stage career her mother intended for her: pointed out that with this nose I'd be playing Juliet's nurse or Juliet's nurse's nurse, and never Juliet." An early photograph of her peering, like Eustace Tilley, through a monocle and another portrait, from Horst'a "Salute to the Thirtles" (for which she wrote a charming preface), in which she gazes plaintively into the middle distance, suggest that she has had moments of taking herself rather seriously.

She has always lived in hotel rooms (currently, the Paris Ritz). "I am very undomestic." she says. "And I don't want one of those jewe's of a French cook who want to cook a little and eat a lot."

There is no journalistic disorder in the room, there are no "I have a pretty stocky memory, after all," Miss Flanner says. She also relies heavily on The New Yorker's library.

"The New Yorker has a boney of a library full of checkers checking. All those people are experts. Hardly any writer is protected like that. It gives me a feeling of being pleasantly goaded."

These days Janet Flanner spends more and more time in the United States, though she has yet to go back to Indiana "Not on your life, baby"). She filed her last words on Gen. de Gaulle from California': Napa Valley, where her younger sister lives, fording a flooded stream to get to the telegrapher's. She won cheers on the Dick Cavett show for declaring that her spatting co-guests, Gore Vidal and Norman Mailer, bored her silly, and she is the subject of a long TV documentary now being made. "I hope I'll live through it," she says. "I'll never have enough clothes to live through it."

Two collections of Letters From Paris have been published, and this past Bastille Day a new volume of, for the most part, lighter snippets from 1925-39 came out under the title "Paris Was It is, says Miss Flanner, the first of ber books to sell well, but she doesn't quite approve of the book and had to be nudged into letting it come out. "I'm rather old-fashioned and stuffy. This isn't the type of at all-lt's rather giddy and flip.

It is a marvelously high-spirited book, "So much has been going on in Paris that you wouldn't believe it, even if we merely claimed to have witnessed half of it." one Letter begins. The book has its sober moments, but it rejoices in such characters as the exquisite Jacques Hennessey, "who never walked if the effort took him away from carpets"; Marguerite Long, "an obedient and powerful French pianist popular in minesterial circles"; Mata Hari, who was half Dutch and half Javanese ("Both sides predominated, giving her the benefit of neither"), and Dr. Bougrat, "one of the most popular poisoners of Marseilles, recently fled from his cell te Caracas, where he enjoys a flourishing general practice, though nose and throat were his original specialty."

The title "Paris Was Yesterday" makes no sense at all, Miss Flar : says, but it is provocative. It also implies, with some that Paris is not today.

:: certainly does not improve. As for those baby skyscrapers the studing up the river, they really are revolting little things."

nostalgic for the '20s. "Number one, I was 50 years younger, which very attractive," she sald. "Number two, Paris was 50 years older, which is also attractive."

Wilen she began her Paris Letter, Janet Flanner thought of Gibbon as a model; Pater and Browning also helped. She spent a year in Berlin before coming to Paris and during the "30s wrote ne New Yorker's Letter From London for a spell, but the overwhelming influence of her style came from living in France: "The critical faculty. Taste. That's what I have learned here. That and precision of language."

The Result

The result is prose that can sound, uniquely, as if it came straight from the grand siècle, at once sonorous and succinct. There is American gusto but there is also Prench rigor, and above all there is the very French combination of pure reason mixed with a sense of melodrama. She is at her best on extravagant subjects: Isadora Duncan, French murderers, Gen. de Gaulle. "I am very sympathetic to anyone who's historically an exception. De Gaulle's got such a damn good mind. We don't often get a president of our republic with such a good mind. you and Miss Flanner loves Chartres for its candy and its cathedral ("I'm very interested in ecclesiastical architecture, remarkably for an old Indiana Quaker"). She likes Italian ice cream and French fresh vegetables, hates it if someone says "hi" and says the reason she's at the Ritz is for its nearby trees. "I am a dendrophile. So is my dear sister, Hildegarde. She a poet." For so urbane a person, Janet Flanner loves country pleasures. "I like country things. I like quiet. I'm very fond sunsets. Im not an expert on them, but I like them gulte well." She works extremely hard. "Anyone who works as hard as I do has to be a good writer," she says. "I work with a conscientious kind of disciplire. I work like a beaver, I go over each Letter

On her desk there are sheets of paper bearing the thrifty letterbead of some foreign correspondents' association and covered with her large, rolling hand. A small Olivetti perches on the desk corner. Janet Flanner turned 80 last spring, but she is an unflagging enthusiast:

TOKYO, Sept. 5 (AF).—The Japanese fertilizer industry signed an export contract worth nearly $100 million in Peking today end-ing months of negotiations, but some officials were not completely happy about the terms.

Chinese agreed to buy 380,000 metric tons of ammonium sulphate and 1.4 million tons of urea, down from 750,000 tons of ammonium sulphate and 1.75 million tons of urea centracted a year carlier.

Negotiations took 131 days, largely because the Japanese were asking the Chinese to pay 30 percent higher prices for ammonium sulphate and 20 percent higher prices for urea compared with a year earlier.

They aettled for an increase averaging 11 percent, officials of the Ammonium Sulphate Industry Association said.

Shozo Hayashi, a managing director of the association, expressed disappointment at the settlement price, noting that international fertilizer prices are rising rapidly. In May, Japanese fertilizer producers signed a con-tract to ship 228,000 tons of urea to India at a price 20 percent above the international level prevailing a year earlier. Meanwhile, the Chinese are taking steps to reduce their dependency on foreign fertilizer. Mitsui Toatsu Chemicals Inc. said it will send a mission to Peking shortly to negotiate the sale of plant and equipment capable be producing about 1,000 tons of ammonium and 1,500 tons

North American Rockwell Corp., which last month won the prime contract for the $2.6 billion Space Sbuttle, may retain up to 70 percent of the over-all contract money for itself and its four principal subcontracting partners on the original shuttle proposal, company and industry sources have revealed.

The four principal partners of Rockwell are Minneapolis Honeywell Corp., for the flight control system: International Business Machines Corp., for the navigational system: General Electric, for reusable surface installations, and American Airlines for the "Turnaround preparations," The GE and American Airlines systems are particularly extensive and unique since the Space Shuttle is the first spacecraft design ed to be returned to earth and to be used repeatedly rather than simply discarded. If the 70 percent figure is the

Now the declarer had no choice but to play the club king and queen, going ignominiously ooe down. As North pointed out afterward, South was trying for 12 tricks, not 13. So he did not baye to content himself with the 80 percent routine play, which would produce 13 tricks. He could and should have given himself a better than 97 percent chance by cashing the spade queen and playing a low club from both hands at the third trick. Not, as they concede, the whole range of Indian life. The country is too vast and too var-rious for that. It is the life of an Everyman, who is neither too poor nor too rich (though they touch on beggars and princes), neither too saintly nor too sinful, neither too conspicuous, though not a cipher either. He is, in short a human being like us. "Dyed-in-the-wool novelists" as they describe themselves, both sisters have lived in India a good part of the time (Jon was born in Bengal), and in this volume they have written about that ongoing, day-by-day existence that is likely to suffer the fewest changes with the turning years. It is a book of observation, not political comment, of understanding and empathy, not of judgment. When they describe the prevalence of heggars, they try to show how these people appear to the Indians; when they tell about those who, having no place of their own, sleep on mats in the streets, they try to make sense of this phenomenon to Westerners who might be inclin-

Today We Are Sad . "Sports should be sports everywhere we go," Taha said. "Political matters should be handled outside. Yesterday we were very Cuban Boxer Beats Bobick of U.S.

MUNICH, Sept. 5 (AP).-Cuban heavyweight Teofilo Stevenson scored a technical knockout in the third round today over Duane Bobick of Bowlus, Minn, ending the United States' eight-year domination of Olympic ! eavyweight boxing.

With his left eye nearly closed from the Cuban's left jab, Bobick was knocked down twice in the third round before the referee stopped the fight with 1:26 remaining.

Bobick first went down from body punches shortly after the third round began. He may have slipped slightly, but the second knockdown came from a hard right to the stomach.

The red-haired Navy quartermaster looked exhausted as he rose from his knees. The Cuban attacked again, and the referee Bobick, 22, who beat Stevenson in last year's Pan-American-Games, looked slow and tired, possibly from his gruelling light Sunday with Yuri Nesterov of the Soviet Union.

Russia Advances All Seven Teams In Canoe Events

MUNICH, Sept. 5 (AP).-Tha Soviet Union advanced all its seven teams to the semifinals or finals in qualifying heats of the Olympic canoeing competitions today. All seven U.S. entrants failed to advance. In canoeing, the first three finishers go into semifinals or finals, while the others paddle in repechages, with a second chance After the 17 qualifying races at the Oherschleissheim regatta course, only Mrs. Smoke among the Americans appeared to have any real chance of reaching the finals, which are currently scheduled for Friday. The Russians took six heat victories, Romania three and Hungary two. Others were shared between Norway, East Germany. Czechoslovakia, Belgium, Germany and Holland.

Stevenson, with an advantage in reach over Bobick, opened the fight with a series of left jabs. He pounded Bobick with a leftright combination and then finished the round jabbing so effectively that Bobick's left eye, irritated in the fight, with tha Russian, was almost fully closed.

In the second round Stevenson secred with combinations and seemed fully in control even when Bobick pinned him in his corner, Bohick looked slow and plodding as the third round began, and could not muster an effective defense against Stevenson's hard punching.

In other results today, Leszek Blazynski, a Polish flyweight, won a 3-2 decision over You Chong-man of South Korea, The quarterfinal victory moved him into the semifinal round. ..

George Turpin became Britain's first man through to the semifinals when he knocked down and defeated John Nderu, a Kenyan bantamweight. The judges gave Turpin a 4-1 decision. His semifinal opponent will be Orlando Martinez of Cuba, who dominated Ferry Moniaga of Indonesia. The Cuban was given a 5-0 victory and was awarded a full 20 points by each judge in every round. Samuel Mbugua of Kenya advanced to the semifinals with a lightweight victory over Sven Erik Paulsen of Norway.

Another Kenyan Wins Dick Tiger Murunga of Kenys advanced to the welterweight semifinals with a left-hook knockout of Sergio Lozano of Mexico in the first round, Lozano was counted out one second before the end of the first round.

Spitz, Under Guard, Retires And Begins Voyage to U.S.

MUNICH, Sept, 5 (UPI).—What was to bave been the final triumphal hour of these Olympic Games for Mark Spitz turned into a tense, uncomfortable session, for him today,

At a news conference, the U.S. swimmer, who is Jewish, huddled between team leaders and refused to approach the microphone because of the Arab guerrilla terrorism in the Olympic Village. He was later guarded by American military policemen before he flew bome to the United States, days early. Asked about the killing and kidnappings, he said: "I have no comment. It is a very tragic thing."

Spitz, who finally had ecemed to break down his reserve and relax following his 100-meter freestyle victory Sunday night for his sixth gold medal, once more was cautious and short with his word. [He won a seventh gold medal as a member of the 400-meter medley relay champions.]
He reiterated that he plans to retire

"I feel I would like to end my career at the Olympic Games,"

The 22-year-old dental student from Carmichael, Calif., admitted that his failure at Mexico City in the 1968 Olympic Games—when he failed to win a single individual gold medal despite brash promises—bad weighed on his mind.

"It's been a lot of bard work since 1968 and a lot of worry about whether I would do the same thing as in Mexico." In London, where he stayed overnight on his trip home. Spitz said he had been shocked by the Arab attack hut had athlete's search for a magic potion to improve his performance is nothing new, according to an Olympic Medical Commission member, Dr. Daniel F. Hanley. Macedonian soldiers are said to have used a mescaline-like substance obtained from mushrooms, and a group of Nordic soldiers known as the berserkers used a constituent of a fungus, In the 16th century, Europeans began using drugs containing caleine. In 1865, there was a doping case reported among canal swimmers in Amsterdam, and in 1886, the first athletic doping fatality was recorded, that of a British cyclist racing from Paris

Olympic officials did not begin to take the doping problem seriously until 1960, when a cyclist died after a race in Rome; he apparently had taken large doses of an amphetamine. A numher of international athletic federations put pressure on the International Olympic Committee to do something.

Spot Checks at Mexico By 1968, it did. The first Olympic dope-control program was set up at the Winter Games in Gre-noble and about 50 spot checks daily were made later that year in Mexico City.

Since then, certain techniques have been almost perfected. Dr. Hanley, an American phy-sician, soys that no doubt many

The athletes, who return the forms unsigned, have been asked, among other things, if they would be taking the steroids if there were a detection system. Invariably, the answer is no. They reply that they take them not in an effort to secure some advantage but simply to keep up with everybody else. "It is cumbersome, difficult, practically impossible to detect steroids," Dr. Hanley said. "The British have developed a blood test, but it, too, is quite cumbersome. It's difficult to tell if the steroids are from pills or from one's own body.

"We're in a pill-taking cuiture," Dr. Hanley continued. "The idea that pills will even change a situation is so false. If you take a tranquilizer, you're just a lit-tle sleepy and angry instead of being angry.

Lest night, the IOC's medical commission refused to allow him compete in the freestyle.

Demont, an asthmatic, took an ephedrine drug called Marax to help his breathing, a prescribed drug that is taken by many asthma sufferers. It is also a drug on the forbidden list of the IOC medical commission. Today, Prince Alexandre de MUNICH, Sept. 5 (IHT).—The Moroccan soccer player sat in his underwear, eight wires attached to his body, and puffed away into a gasmasklike device while pedaling a German bicycle.

Before him, the Australian rowing team had been the guines pig and before them it was long-distance runners Derek Clayton and Kerry O'Brien. The results of these tests in the scien tific world of sports won't be known for many months, but the expected computerized grada will be something like: "work hard and you shall succeed," an ideology battered into the young and now being proved.

At the Olympic Games, strain means the dif-ference between gold and silver and so medical teams—from psychologists to those plucking hair out of women's heads for sex tests—have taken their places in the Olympic Village were there is an overabundance of healthy specimens. Ladislav Peter Novak, a Southern Methodict

University professor of anthropology and con-sultant in pathology for the Saylor University Medical Center, had his place early. 'Guideline' Sought "We don't know the upper level of men's phy-

"We are trying to produce a certain guideline for coaches and "If you want to achieve world records, you must have an oxygen intake of 80 milititers per kilo of body weight. To keep aerobic capacity to a high level, athletes always have to stress themselves," Novak said. "Look at the training of the young American swimmers. They must stress themselves every day. There is no such thing as overdoing it. They can take it."

Long Run to School

"Look at the Kenyans," Novak continued. "They told me that when they were young, they ran 25 kilometers every day to school and 25 kilometers back, and now, they run less now than the U.S. runner because they build up at a younger age a higher aerobic capacity. A 10,000-meter run is fun for them. 'In truth, Kip Keino, a gold medalist in the 1,500 in 1968 and in the 3,000meter steeplechase here, has a toothy smile when running, and even when losing.

"The Americans," Novak said "are used to sitting in cars and buses and must compensate now by training five, six hours a day."

The basic testing device is a bicycle ergometer. With its multiple attachments, the machine tests cardio - vascular - respiratory litness. As the athlete pedals away, more resistance is pumped by machine into the pedals and the cyclist must work harder until he reaches his maximum workload. Novak will try to test sthletes from various strenuous sports and then tell coaches and athletes how much, and how hard, a training session is necessary. In many cases, he will have to wait until the Games are over. Most coaches don't want their athletes giving their best event to an ergometer.

Ajax Plays Independiente Tonight in World Club Match

By Brian Glanville

LONDON, Sept. 5 (IHT) .- In- Brazil, is keen to return, providdependiente plays Ajax of Amsterdam tomorrow in Buenos Aires for the so-called Intercontinental Championship. It has also been called the world club championship, though in fact it is, quite simply, a two-legged enthe European Cup and the winners of the South American Liberators' Cup, which was brought into being precisely for this purpose. Last season was the first time since 1960 the series was not played; Ajax withdrew on allegedly medical grounds, in fact because they were afraid of their players being maltreated as so many European teams had been in the past.

In a sense, a very real sense, Argentinian football will be on trial tomorrow. Any sort of re-petition of the dreadful violence associated with these matches in the past must seriously jeopardize not only the competition, but the chances of Argentina putting on the World Cup, as they are due - to, in 1978.

Awalts Sentence

Though Pastoriza, the midfield star, a frequent goal scorer and a splendid header of the ball, -should be able to play—he swaits sentence for being expelled in Brazil's Independence Cup, and won't in any case leave for Monaco till October-Semenewicz, a star defender, won't. He has been suspended after his part in that notorious Rio match against Yugoslavia, for third place, for three months. Dominici, another Argentinian defender, gets four, which indicates that at long last the Argentinian football authoritles are beginning to take metters seriously. It is a little lete in the day, and I still fear for the long, slim, remarkable legs of Johan Cruyff, Ajax's centerforward. He won't be consoled to know that when Sao Paolo was beaten in Buenos Aires in a South American Cup semifinal a few months ago, Pavoni, Independiente's Uruguayan interna-tional left-back, kicked an opposing forward so badly that he needed several stitches.

Brazil, I am sure, would want him again, even if his alleged farewell matches for them, a year or so ago, were unimpressive. Pelé, then, looked plump and out of condition, but we all know that the Brazilian World Cup team is rather like an elderly roue who needs generous time and constant stimulus. The usual three-month preparation in training camp would doubtless bring Pelé, even at 33, and the whole team to the

All-American History

WASHINGTON. — A Nixonian cao party saw no reason to come history of America: America was discovered in 1492 by a hard- dards these magnificent old Demworking ethoic named Columbus, following in the wooderful Ameri- roe, Jackson-would be called can tradition of that magnificent Scandinavian Leif

Neither of them, as Abraham Lincoin later commented on his way to prayer, could have done the job, however. without the ingreat citizeo :

Baker

Poland, Pulaski, who oever allowed the word "abortico" to be spoken at his dinner table. As soon as the discovery had been given satura-tion media exposure, the Americans began moving out of Europe to escape the horrors of religious persecution, which was the Communism of that period.

Polls soon showed that thera would have to be a revolution to preserve what was right about America. For years, Americans had been working hard to buy themselves a small home and send their children to a decent school, while some people far away in London were spending the American taxpayers' money oo idle loafing around Pall Mall and four-day weekends at Cheq-

Americans were sick and tired of supporting these spongers, who laughed when George Washingtoo told them there was nothing undignified in taking honest but menial jobs.

In the resulting revolution everyooe commented favorably upon the Americans' strict adherence to the rules of fair play. America had giveo the world a beautiful example of how to conduct a revolution without making a nuisaoce of yourself, as some small countries do today.

The Founding Fathers, thanks to the help of millions of Americens of Irish and Greek ancestry, then established the United States of America and created the federal system of government which is based upon a delicate balance of power among the Presideot, the Department of Defense and the Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

In the peaceful years that followed, the Democratic party governed so well that the Republiinto existence. By today's stanocrats-Jeffersoo, Madison, Mon-Republicans; for in those days the Democratic party had not yet beeo seized by dangerous radicals feared by every honest, hardworking American in the land.

Those early Democrats believed in keeping America Number One. That was why America invented the steamboat, baseoall, compone, the Victrola, Peruna and the coenskin cap, among other great contributions to American life.

Eventually, however, there was grave trouble. No longer could the Republican party refuse to heed the natioo's call. Fierce debate was brewing in the land. Out of the prairie country, out of the log-cabin past came a gaunt, plain-spoken lawyer, a man they called Abe.

In speech after speech. Abraham Lincoln attacked the Democratic party's failurs to take a firm stand on the most pressing moral issue of the day.

The misrepresentation and distortion of Lincoln's statements committed by a biased press gave the impression that Lincoln was opposing the South on the slavery question. Repeatedly, Lincoln tried to tell America that this was oot so, what really alarmed him was the Democratic party's softness oo Arabs.

It was useless, of course. The Southern states, misled by the media conspiracy, came to regard Lincoln as an enemy. This tragic misunderstanding set off the War Between the States, thus distracting American military power for four loog years from the growing Arab menace.

In the meantime, of course, America was going from strength to strength. The tax haven was invected, and the hamburger, and Southern California, and the 30second TV campaign spot com-

America sooo became the great frieod and champion of freedom everywhere in the world. This made Americans proud and bappy. Today they have uo problems worth speaking of, except for the presence of a few coogenital malcontents of the sort who can never see the doughnut for staring at the hole.

Their present leader, President Nixon, has many good friends who are Catholic.

The bus conductor, instead of collecting fares, carries a ticket machine that issues poems especially composed for the occasion.

Mobile Entertainment On the Fun Art Bus

By John Walker

I ONDON (IHT).—The figure is recognizably American, clad in a quantity of clashing colored checks and with a voice as flamboyant:

"You don't know who I am. Allow me to tell you. My name is Otto Premier-Check. You are going to absolutely hate the show you are about to sec. "Yoo wanta know why? Because the company is bad.

They're really very terrible. You may wonder why do I put "The answer is: I'm American. In America, what's bad is good because it makes money. Or, to put it another way, what's good is bad because it makes money. Let me tell you a liddle secret: rubbish makes money! What you are about to watch is rubbish. Awful!" So opened a show that delighted many Londoners this summer, providing a slightly surreal experience since it took place on what, at first glance, looked like a cormal red London double-decker ous and, instead, turned oot to be a fun palace

The show, oeedless to say, was good. For thinly disguised as Otto Premier-Check was Ed Berman, born in Maine 31 years ago, who runs Britain's most vital community arts group,

A Challenge

The Fun Art Bus is his latest brain-child, "Its purpose," be says, is to challenge artists to relate their work to people in everyday circumstances and to bring a sense of fun to the streets.

Appearances are deceptive. The Fun Art Bus may resemble a normal London double-decker, but it contains $8,000 of electronic equipment, ranging from an electric piano on the hood—played by the driver—to a complex sound system that provides music and commentary for the passengers.

Downstairs, there is a small cinema as well as the artists' dressing rooms. They make their entrances to the tiny theater on the top deck of the bus through two trap doors. Passeogers ride free. The bus cooductor, instead of col-lecting fares, carries a ticket machine that issues poems specially composed for the occasion by a number of writers, including the Liverpool poets Roger McGough and Briao Patten. The bus's front windows have been decorated by the artist Feliks Topolski, and the back contains a work by leading British cartoonist Ralph Steadman. When the bus is stationary, people in the street can watch a mime show in ooe of the side

During its appearances as part of the recent London festivals, the bus used regular stops, to the amazement of some com-muters. Says Mr. Berman: "I don't want people to come to see the bus specially.

HOLIDAYS & TRAVEL

"I'd rather they just found it as part of their everyday experience and either wandered with the bus or used it to get somewhere. A major element of environmental theater is that it happens by accident, as an integrated part of what people are normally doing,"

Leading playwrights such as Tom Stoppard, Frank Marcus and Henry Livings have written for the Fun Art Bus.

Mr. Berman expects that the bus will become a permanent feature of Europe's artistic scene. "We have been approached to bire out the bus and The Dogg's Troupe (one of Inter-Action's street theater groups) in Europe for £400 a day," he says. The hus's 60 circuits in London this summer have almost paid off Inter-Action's initial investment in equipping and Says Mr. Berman: "Socially, the bus can cut across class, geographic and age barriers. Artistically, it makes an ideal mobile environmental arts center without being in any way

At the end of each journey, the company sings a farewell song to the passengers:

some 50 countries, possibly in-cluding Russia and China, are man's lot was man expected to view a 60-minute live by the car's per television concert by Eivis Presley in January. The swivel-hipped singer, wearing rings on every finger of his right hand, blue tinted glasses and a glittering white suit made the announcement Monday, the closing night of a month-long engagement at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel. "It's hard to believe," Presley said. "It's fantastic. I hope it comes off good. Live concert is my favorite part of show busi-ness because of the electricity." The announcement revealed no money figures. The show will be aired live to Australia, Japan, Korea, New Zealand, the Philippines, Thailand and South Vietnam. The following night, a Eurovision simulcast will beam the concert to sudiences in 28 European countries. It will be shown later in the United States. Negotiations are under way to air the show to the Soviet Union and China, the announcement

Charles R. Wood was quoted in his high school yearbook as wanting someday to own a Duesenberg automobile. The Lake George, N.Y., motel and restaurant owner satisfied that dream Monday and got a little extra glamor besides. Wood paid $90,000 for Gretz Garbo's bloodred Duesenberg at the Auburn-Cord-Duesenberg festival in Auburn, Indiana, a town of 7,500 where the three aristocratic cars were manufactured. Kruse Aucdoneers said it was the highest price ever for an automobile. They said more than $1 million was paid for some 150 classic cars. The 24-foot-Model J. Victoria was enstom built for Miss Garbo in 1923. It has a plush, cream interior and 16 locked compartments, including a jewel strong box under the right rear iender. Miss Garbo had hidden it from German soldiers in World War II and later sold it to an American GI who toured Europe

Another car, or more specifically its license plate, was the undoing of Gerardo Salavar, 18, of Bakersfield: California, Buth Lewis reported the car stolen Monday. State highway petrolmen started chasing it after its driver sped away from a service station without paying for a tank
